

Bulletin of the Essex Institute, Vol. 18: Jan;, Feb;, Mar;, 1886 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Bulletin of the Essex Institute, Vol. 18: Jan;, Feb;, Mar;, 1886 It is a well-known fact that when water evaporates, heat is absorbed; hence we say evaporation causes cold. When the molecules of water separate and assume the vaporous condition, they need energy and so absorb all the heat they can. When condensation takes place, the molecules come together again and assume the cold, sluggish condition of a liquid, hence they do not need the energy to keep them in activity and the heat is given off again. This latent heat plays a most important part in the production of storms. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
