

Educational Papers: A Supplement to the South India Missionary Conference Report (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Educational Papers: A Supplement to the South India Missionary Conference Report

The following papers are published as a supplement to the Report of the South India Missionary Conference held at Bangalore in June 1879. The Memorial to the Madras Government, which began the controversy with the Director of Public Instruction, originated with the Madras Missionary Conference, but it was largely supported throughout the Presidency, as the names appended to it show, and was adopted by the South India Missionary Conference in the following Resolution: -That this Conference approves generally of the Memorandum regarding Aided Education addressed to his Grace the Governor in Council, and the Remarks on the Directors proposed rules; and expresses its decided opinion that the matter should, if necessary, be carried to the highest authority. Further, the Executive Educational Committee, which is responsible for the other papers, was appointed by the General Conference to watch over the interests of education throughout the Presidency. It is, therefore, only due to those who composed that Conference, and to others interested in Aided Education throughout the Presidency, to lay before them these papers. The Educational Despatch of 1854 has been printed as the first Paper, because it is the authoritative exposition and enactment of the educational policy to be pursued in India, and because on it the Memorialists entirely take their stand.
