

History of the Town of Dunbarton, Merrimack County, New-Hampshire: From the Grant by Masons Assigns, in 1751, the Year 1860 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from History of the Town of Dunbarton, Merrimack County, New-Hampshire: From the Grant by Masons Assigns, in 1751, the Year 1860

The incidents attending the settlement and onward progress of an inland agricultural town, cannot be expected to interest others than its residents, or the descendants of its early proprietors, the forefathers of the hamlet, whose honored graves are located amidst the scenes of their former toil. Their indomitable resolution and life-enduring labors cleared away the wild forests, and destroyed or expelled their wilder occupants, the wily human savage, as also the ferocious animals that prowled at will amid their solitudes. They prepared the pleasant fields and pastures now adorning our hill-sides and valleys, for the peaceable enjoyment of their posterity. The fortunate possessors of this fair domain, whose acquisition was attended by neither toil or danger, cannot too highly appreciate the noble sacrifices and cheerfully encountered perils of the stalwart pioneers who transmitted to them so goodly an heritage. They were truly, in the words of the Scottish bard, Types of a race that shall the invader scorn, As rocks resist the billows round their shore; Types of a race that shall to time unborn, Their country leave unconquered, as of yore.
