Excerpt from State Papers Relating to Musters, Beacons, Ship-Money, &C. ,In Norfolk: From 1626 Chiefly to the Beginning of the Civil WarThe papers published by Mr. Rye are primarily of local interest. They show how Norfolk was governed in the early part of the reign of Charles I., and who the gentlemen were who took the chief part in the management of county business. They show also the relative populousness and wealth of the different portions of the county, and their relative contributions towards local and imperial burdens.The documents fall into two classes. Some of them are commissions, orders, proclamations, and instructions issued by the King and his council to the local authorities. Copies of most of them are to be found in the records of other counties, though few of them have been hitherto printed in full. These documents throw some interesting sidelights on the foreign and domestic policy of Charles I., as for instance the letter to the justices of the peace in 1626 setting forth the Kings case against the Parliament which he had just dissolved (p. 21), and those explaining the necessity of sending help to the King of Denmark (pp. 36, 55), and the necessity of relieving Rochelle and Stade (p. 118).Similar letters, mutatis mutandis, were addressed to the authorities in Essex and elsewhere, for it was through these communications to the justices and deputy lieutenants that the King put before the country the case of the Government against the Opposition.About the PublisherForgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
